

Whatever Weather

Malcolm Smith

Who knows which way the wind will blow, it's from the north today

Tomorrow it may turn around and blow the other way

Whichever way the wind may blow you're always here with me

And I am here with you as well it's where I want to be

When the wind is in the south it often brings us rain

But when it turns round to the north the sky will clear again

Who knows if it will rain today or if we'll see the sun
This morning may be drear but then another day will come
Whatever weather comes our way or if we're feeling blue
We know the blues will never stay but I will stay with you

*If the blues should visit me and lay my spirits low
You always seem to lift me up and make my dark blues go*

Who knows if it will snow today the clouds are dark and low
I'm chilled through to my bones you know I'm sure it looks like snow
But if it snows all through the night and clear sky comes with dawn
The land will shine in gleaming white to greet the fresh new morn

*And then we'll dress up nice and warm and pull our big boots on
To mark our footsteps in the snow and pull our sled along*

Who knows which way the wind will blow, it's from the north today
Tomorrow it may turn around and blow the other way
Whichever way the wind may blow you're always here with me
And I am here with you as well it's where I want to be
